Mature Suburbs Find Strength in Numbers Mount Clemens Joins Suburbs Alliance

FERNDALE – The Michigan Suburbs Alliance today welcomed the city of Mount Clemens into its coalition of older, built-out suburbs, marking an increased interest by local governments in working together to address shared challenges.

“Communities are finding that addressing many of the issues they face requires reaching beyond their borders,” said Suburbs Alliance Executive Director Conan Smith. “The Suburbs Alliance offers cities a forum for initiating collaborative actions and finding allies among their neighbors.”

Often bypassed by developers for easier development in outlying suburbs, Mount Clemens and other older suburbs are struggling to raise revenue under the crippling interplay of Proposal A and the Headlee Amendment. Rising healthcare costs have hit them harder than younger suburbs because of their significantly larger retiree stock, and decreasing populations and changing demographics pose additional challenges for many of these cities. Intensifying their struggles are decreased state and federal funding and a stagnant economy. Many have been forced to sell city property, reduce essential services and even raise taxes.

The Suburbs Alliance, a nonprofit organization founded in 2002, was created by a group of elected and appointed suburban leaders to give inner suburbs a means by which to organize around the issues that they all face. The organization is working to facilitate regional collaboration, encourage the use of innovative redevelopment processes and reform public policy that affects mature communities. Its members spread across Wayne, Oakland, Macomb Washtenaw counties.

Mount Clemens, a community of about 17,000 and the capital of Macomb County, hopes to stimulate developer interest in the city by participating in the Suburbs Alliance’s Redevelopment Ready Communities program, one of the only programs in the country that certifies cities for incorporating expertly designed best practices into their redevelopment processes. It is also interested in municipal collaboration.

“We are very excited to partner with other communities that are facing similar issues that we, as a mature city, are now facing,” said Arthur Mullen, Executive Director of the Mount Clemens Downtown Development Authority.

The Michigan Suburbs Alliance is currently working to build a metropolitan agenda for policy reform that integrates goals for mature suburbs with the best interests of the region. A draft agenda will be discussed at its annual meeting on May 19, 2006, which is open to the public.
